CARAVANE Final Festival – Málaga

This newsletter presents the CARAVANE Final Festival in Málaga, marking a moment of culmination and collective reflection. The festival brings together participants, partners, and audiences to share experiences developed throughout the project.

Rather than focusing solely on outcomes, the festival highlights the processes, relationships, and collaborations that define the CARAVANE journey.

CARAVANE Final Festival – Málaga

The Final Festival takes place in Málaga, offering a programme of performances, exhibitions, screenings, and public encounters. Artistic works presented at the festival emerge from laboratories, exchanges, and workshops held across partner countries.

The festival foregrounds process over product. Participants share not only artistic outcomes but also reflections on collaboration, experimentation, and learning. This approach allows audiences to engage with the values underpinning CARAVANE, including co-creation, inclusion, and openness.

The event also functions as a meeting point for participants from different phases of the project. Encounters between artists, facilitators, and audiences generate moments of dialogue and reflection, reinforcing relationships built over time.

By situating the final festival in Málaga, the project connects local audiences with CARAVANE's wider European context, emphasising both place-based engagement and transnational cooperation.

The Final Festival represents a shared moment of recognition and closure. It reflects the collective effort invested throughout CARAVANE and contributes to a legacy rooted in collaboration, dialogue, and creative engagement with climate-related issues.
